NATURDAY MARCH THE DAILY SENTINEL ON EARLY TRAINS.

THE DAILY STATE SENTINEL is sent by all the early morning express and freight trains, and delivered to subscribers in adjacent towns about the same time it is distributed in this city. This enables readers at a distance Unforgotten, save when o'er thy soul comes from the Capital of Indiana, to get the news of the day from six to twelve hours before they can receive it through papers published elsewhere. News dealers and carriers Indreams last night, twas sweet to be forgetful of in any of the towns on railroads centering at Indianapolis, will be supplied with the SENTINEL on as good terms as any other paper. Clubs for the Daily will be supplied at Agents' rates. Orders are solicited.

SPEECHES OF Hendricks and Voorbees.

The speech of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, before the Democratic Convention on the Eighth of January, 1862, and the speech of Hon. Daniel W. Voorbees, in the House of Representatives, February 20, on the duty of the Federal Government in its relations to the civil war and the All, all were with me in that dream, are lingerobjects for which it should be prosecuted, are for sale at this office, published in a pamphlet of sixteen pages, in- The gentle pressure of that hand still stealing cluding both speeches. Dr. Athon, who, by the order of General Halleck and Gov. Morton, recently visited the ospitals on the Ohio, where our wounded at Fort Donelson are quartered, has returned to this city. Dr. Athon spent some two weeks rendering all the aid in his power as a physician and surgeon to the brave and unfortunate men. He related to us yesterday a singular coincidence. He met at the hospital at Mound City a Dr. Hotchkiss, a volunteer surgeon, with whom, just fifteen years before, on the very day they were thrown together, at the time of which we are speaking, he was may reinvigorate the inner man and go on their performing like duties on the bloody field of Buena Vista for our gallant boys who there fell -Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Rigley, of the Rich- wounded. H. H. Nelson. March 7, 1862. For the Daily State Sentinel. Farmers Visiting the City.

The merchants and business men of Indianapolis are not aware of the detriment to their business caused by the arrest and heavy fining of the farmers by the municipal authorities, for leaving their teams standing unhitched in the streets. Our police and city authorities are driving a heavy business in this line. The police are more vigilant for the arrest of some unsuspecting farmer or countryman, ignorant of the law, whom they find leaving his horses unhitched, then they are to discover the burglars who infest our city. The police are known to keep their spies on the corners of our streets to watch when a country man leaves his team but for a minute, and have them reported to the policeman, who makes the arrest. A policeman has been known to watch a countryman, and to see him leave his team standing unhitched, without deigning to warn of his penalty, and then arrest the offender if he was absent but a minute. In most of these cases the city gets but one cent damages while the Mayor gets his $1 50, the Marshal his $1 75, the City Attorney his $2, and the informant or witness fifty cents, besides the fees for making out complaint, &c ; compelling the offender to pay five or six dollars, all of which go to the officials-ex-

HOUSE .- Mr. Gurley introduced a bill to se cure to pilots, engineers, sailors and crews upon the gunboats and war vessels their bounty and The House then proceeded to the consideration of the bill to authorize the Secretary or the Treasury to purchase coin and for other purposes. Mr. Pendleton inquired of Mr. S:evens whether in his (Stevens') opinion it was necessary to authorize the side of the five hundred million bonds re cently authorized in order to realize sufficient coin for the payment of the interest, which could not be by next July more than forty million and the sixty million of indebtedness. Mr. Stevens did not think it necessary, but i was found by the Secretary of the Treasury that rifice, which he did not choose to make; hence he suggested the passage of the bill, so that the specie section of the recently enacted United States law may not be repudiated Mr. Stevens, in reply, said that the new five hundred million bonds had not vet been issued. Mr Pendieton expressed himself satisfied with the explanation and would vote for it. He however offered an amendment, which wa agreed to, re-asserting that the demand notes shall be receivable for duties on imports with this The bill was then passed as originally intro-

Mr. Harding rising to an explanation said that he had noticed in the newspapers that the Chairman of the Committee on Territories had re ported a bill providing for Territorial Govern ments in the seceding Union. This subject had been discussed in the public prints. He (Harding) was at a loss to ascertain how this information was obtained

Mr. Ashley, the Chairman of the committee informed his colleague thereon, that the commit tee authorized him to report the bill, and under instructions he (Ashley) had moved its printing and recommitment to the committee. Mr. Harding said that the newspapers also said that the Senate Committee on Territories has concurred in the provisions of this bill. Mr. Ashley replied that he was not aware that that committee, with the Chairman of whom he Sr. Louis, March 7 .- A special dispatch to the had been in consultation, had come to any con clusion on the subject. If the newspapers had made a misstatement the Chairman of neither of the committees was responsible for it.

members of the committee had agreed on this bill, and vet it was sent out as the report of the majority of the committee. Mr. Ashley further explained that he gave printed copies to those who asked for them. He said a very great pressure had been brought to bear through the newspapers to force Gen. Fremont back into a command, and to force the Administration against its judgment,

Mr. Riddle, of Ohio, asked on what authority Mr. Blair, resuming, said-No demand for trial has been made, unless it has been done within two or three days. General Fremont had not made the demand at all, for he (Blair) had taken pains to satisfy himself of the fact by inquiry at the Adjutant General's office and the A second visit to Columbus reveals many facts Judge Advocate of the Army. It had also been heralded that the Committee on the Conduct of the War had demanded his 'Fremont's) restoration. He (Blair) undertook to say that such was not the fact. It was simply a publication of some of Fremont's partisans, and it was also said through the press that Fremont was to be restored to a command. He (Blair din not know whether this was so or not, but inasmuch as the information came in somewhat the shape of other publications, he believed it was of the same character.

Mr. Blair said there were preliminary symp toms which foreshadowed and announced the si multaneous appearance of the statements made by Gen. Fremont in his defense before the Committee, and the speech of his aid-de camp, Shanks, Boston, March 7 .- The Federal gunboat Tus- in this House. The statement of the speech in carora remained near Gibraltar on the 15th of augurates a new campaign, and a new field, and February. Fremont's hands, have had no serious effect.

He (Blair) commended Gen. Fremont's choice of weapons. Certain it was that his proclamations did not help the enemy as much as his exposed and isolated posts at Lexington and else-

His proclamations did not injure the Adminis tration as much as a single purchase of worth-less arms, and the erection of useless earthworks He (Blair) did not believe that Gen. Fremon was extraordinary in its character.

Mr Grooch, member of the committee on the conduct of the war, said that Gen. Fremont, having presented a large number of documents, was requested by the committee to prepare a constatement as to the administration of affairs i his department, which be (Fremont) did. At a subsequent period Gen. Fremont again appeared before the committee and was questioned. When he was about to leave the room he was requested not to give information to anybody outside of what he had stated to the committee. He (Grooch) understood Gen. F. to acquiesce in this request, as he had in those made by the committee. He (Grooch) only wished to add that the publication was made without the knowledge and against the consent of the committee. Mr. Blair-Was it all published?

Mr. Blair said Mr. Fremont's statement was the extraordinary manner in which it found its way into print. It was an apology for disaster and defeat and the ingenious suppression of important facts and suggestions of others which never existed. In this he shows he is a better apologist for defeat than a General to achieve victories. Mr. Blair proceeded to speak of his early friendship for Fremont. He now had no private griefs, and it was only for the reason that Fremont was found to be incompetent for his position that he considerations of public duty. He then spoke at length of the disasters at Springfield and Lexington to show that they were attributable to Fremont's incompetency, and those by whom he surrounded himself, had settled themselves down upon us like obscene birds of prev. No men have as bad a character as those who are Fremont's familiars, of course there are honorable exceptions. No greater slander was uttered by any man, than that at the time Fremout went to St. Louis, it was a rebellous city. The declaration of martial law was superinduced by his apprehension of imaginary danger Mr. Blair also examined Fremont's contracts and other transactions. He apprehended that it would hereafter appear that General Blair's feelings had perverted his udgment. He knew that all men was fallible. General Fremont was impulsive and impetuous, He regretted that Fremont had suffered the pub lication to which reference was made. He (Colfax) regretted the publication at this time-the future would have done him justice. He should say this much for General Fremont: he was the only Major General who had gone out with his troops away from his headquarters in pursuit of the enemy over land, over plain, or over valley. No man could believe the assertion of the gentleman from Missouri that General Fremont was a timid man. He did not approve General Fremont's St. Louis contracts-he paid too much for them-but such faults were not confined to Gen. Fremont, which he (Colfax) briefly showed. He concurred in the statement of Mr. B. that St. Louis was a loyal city, for when after the General was relieved from his command and proceeded to

Mr. Colfax, in further reply to Mr. Blair, defended General Fremont's military movements, and noticed the remark of the gentleman from Missouri that "the hundred days of General Fremont in that State were the saddest days of all." "Oh no," said Mr. Colfax, "the saddest day was when General Fremont was deposed, when the army took up their line of march back to the

of War to put him on his defense. The meanest man in the world was entitled to fair hearing.
